THANK YOU FOR SPONSORING A ROOF TILE FOR JANE AUSTEN'S HOUSE

Your donation has been recorded in the Roof Donations Register, which will be held for perpetuity in the archive at the Museum.

The roof is the most important part of any building, and the roof at Jane Austen's House is more important than most. It was under these eaves that Jane sat as she worked at her tiny writing desk, creating her extraordinary characters and crafting her immortal plots.

This roof was last refurbished in 1948, before the House was opened to the public. Now, 70 years on and a million visitors later, it needs major repairs to restore and secure it for the future.

Each tile sponsored helps us to renovate the historic roof at Jane Austen's House, using reclaimed, handmade clay roof tiles installed by specialist contractors, to preserve the historic fabric of our architectural heritage.

Thank you for your support!
